Learning Management System

A simple tool designed to run learning modules and tests in an academic institution and enterprise. This system provides the planning, Preparing the courses to running tests to performance evaluation. Learning management system is no longer an alternative, it's a necessity now.

The Need for A Learning Management System.!

From the earliest versions of the LMS that just ran basic training videos and presentations supported by instructor training; the modern LMS has evolved significantly. The popularity and affordability of smartphones & Computers have contributed to the growth of LMS. With the focus shifting on 'anywhere, anytime learning' the current breed of learning management systems is designed to offer a great learning experience on mobile phones and tablet devices as well.

The 'Learning Management System' as a subset of the eLearning industry has evolved to become a stand-alone and prosperous industry domain of its own. With over 700 plus learning management systems available in the market catering the user demands. Most of the time organizations spoil their time in searching the right LMS for their requirement.

What is the purpose of LMS?

A Learning Management System (LMS) is an online system or software that can be used to plan, execute, and assess the learning needs of an organization or enterprise. In simple words, software used in eLearning programs and which helps in administration, documentation, tracking, and recording.

How do LMS systems work?

The best way to imagine a learning management system, as a private website portal. "Private" because despite being remotely deployed and entirely cloud-based, only users with login credentials will be able to access the site. Within the LMS, learning modules are available for users along with assessments and other learning tools.
